Reception to Teachers.

Many parents and citizens were in attendance at the reception given by the "Mothers' Club" in the High school auditorium, Monday evening.

The affair was given to welcome the teachers who were returning, as well as those who were just beginning their year's work among us. Mr.
Bundgaard gave a demonstration of class work with the 5th grade pupils in the gymnasium first. After this everyone was invited to the auditorium, where the teachers were in line to receive the old as well as new friends.

An interesting program was given,
composed of solos and short talks,
which were listened to with interest
by everyone.

To give the occasion an air of sociability and informality, the ladies

SMALL BORE SHOOTING.

There seems to be an idea among big game hunters and military rifle shoots that shooting with a .22 caliber rifle is a child's pastime and unworthy of any male who has reached the long trouser stage. Nothing could be further from the truth. The problems involved in high power rifle shooting are practically all present in miniature rifle shooting, as it is called in England. If a man learns how to hold bunch. Everybody is invited to come

Why Cuthbertson Don't Fight Gene Labelle.

Grayling, Sept. 11, 1916.
Mr. O. P. Schumann.

Dear Sir—Will your kindly print a few lines in your paper, in regards to the reason why Gene Labelle, the soldier boxer who is camping out at the Portage, and I do not box. The officer's tell the Grayling people that they do not understand why I do not go out there and box this man Labelle again, as they have made me so many different offers. Right now I will say, as I have said a good many times, that nothing I would like better than to get this man Labelle in the ring with me for ten rounds or more, but I must have at least two weeks training before I could think of boxing anybody.
These guys always offer me a match on two or three days notice. They seem to want to get me when out of condition so their man would have a better chance to win, but I will not box unless they will give me two weeks time to get in shape, then I don't care who comes. I will be ready to fight anybody they select. But before I go in to training I must see some money in sight as it costs something to train. Sparring partners will not help train unless they get something.
And if I do box this Labelle again somebody is going to be cleaned right;
as I intend to be in the very best condition that I can get in. So if they will not give me time to get in shape, they had better not waste time talking about about it, as nobody knows better than Jim Cuthbertson that a man must be in condition before he can give a good account of himself.
If they want a real good boxer on short notice, long Jimmy Brady writes he will be glad to mix it with this welterweight boxer, Gene Labelle.

I think I have explained plain enough so the people really know that I am not to blame for us not meeting again. Thanking you, I am.

Yours truly,
James Cuthbertson.

Such an occasion as this should be

James B. Angell Memorial Day
October 13.

To the Teachers of Michigan:
It is especially fitting that the schools of Michigan pay tribute to the memory of James Burrill Angell. I therefore designate Friday, October 13 as Angell Day and suggest that appropriate exercises be held on that day in the schools of Michigan in honor of his memory.

Teachers should acquaint the boys and girls of Michigan with the possibilities that our system of schools puts before them. They should be made to know and feel that these things are within the reach of all. A study of the life and work of Dr. Angell will be an inspiration to every child in Michigan—an inspiration that will be a deciding influence in the lives of many.

A bulletin has been prepared to suggest suitable material for a program on Angell Day. Teachers will of course not confine themselves to the material there given. Programs should be varied as occasion suggests. Most communities in Michigan have citizens, who are graduates of the University of Michigan. These should be called upon to contribute their intimate knowledge of the University and its famous president.

Respectfully,
Fred L. Keeler,
Superintendent of Public Instruction.

ten rings being 1/4 inch in diameter.
In other words, the 7, 8, 9, and 10 rings are in the black of the bullseye. The standard target has six bullseyes on it, arranged in a circle around the center of the target, the object of this arrangement being to economize on paper and in the time necessary to change targets. This target must be placed twenty-five yards from the muzzle of the rifle.

All indoor shooting by civilian clubs is done slow fire and from the prone position. The most popular rifles are those weighing from seven to eight and one-half pounds of the singleshot type.

The rules regarding sights permit the use of any sights not containing glass. Most of the shooters use a front sight of the aperture type, which sight consists of a stem and a loop, the bullseye being centered in the hole in the loop. The rear sight is a peep sight and is placed back on the tang of the rifle as near to the eye as possible. The rules also permit the use of a sling strap and consequently everybody uses one. This is fastened to the forearm of the barrel at a point a few inches forward of the point grasped by the left hand. There is considerable skill and knowledge involved in the proper use of a sling strap. The user may use it in such a way as to obtain great benefit or he may apply it in such fashion that it is positively a detriment. The best way is to have it run back from the point at which it is fastened on the right side of the left wrist to a point as high on the upper arm as possible. The arm in combination with the strap then forms a triangle which is one of the recognized forms in which material is placed to secure rigidity.

There does not seem to be any practical method of applying a sling strap to the conventional light weight repeating rifle so as to permit its use for this class of shooting. I have tried it myself and the result so far has been unsatisfactory. I am still working on the problem, however, and if I find any solution of it you may be sure I will announce it in this column, as numbers of shooters would prefer to use their regular .22 caliber hunting rifles rather than purchase a special model.

SOME LONELY WORK IN TEXAS

Stories Coming From The State
Camps And The Border Show That Service Is Not Enfranchising.

Grayling, Mich.—"What are we here for?" Might be a question one soldier would ask of another. There is no question that service on the border is and has been the desire of the Thirty-third regiment but the home feeling is growing, unless the intimation from Washington that the hoped for trip is coming encourages the guardsmen and takes the feeling away by an actual move in that direction. Though some preparations have been made for cold weather, the men have not proper clothing to protect them from cold waves in the north, however, serviceable their supply may be for the south, which looks so attractive to them now. One bit of news caused mixed emotions. That was to the effect that the national guard would be kept on the border until Carranza showed that he could protect American lives and American property. The organizations here want to go to the border, but a long stay with waiting the only service would pull just as almost three months in a mobilization camp has palled.

Home Feeling in Texas.

El Paso, Texas.—Letters from the guardsmen in Grayling, and stories told in the papers received here of the "want to go home" feeling or to do some real active work is permeating the regiments on the border and "when are we going home?" is a frequent question asked here but there is no answer that can be given. It is thought in military circles that the mediation board now attempting to settle Mexican troubles will agree to the withdrawal of the Pershing expedition from Mexico. With this force of regulars added to those already on the border it is thought the need for state troops will end.

Sentry Duty Is Lonely.

El Paso, Texas.—The vigil on the border line now places some of the guardsmen in very lonely places where they must look sharp, more swiftly and silently and be ready for any emergency. It was in a remote outpost on the night before Independence day in Juarez that some of the Michigan guardsmen were on duty. It was a part of the sentry's duty, on this remote outpost in the hills, to go down into an arroyo periodically and stand on the Villa trail, the narrow pass through which Villa took his men on his victorious march into Juarez. The shouts of the celebrating Mexicans were heard throughout the night in Juarez, but scarcely a soul passed this lonely spot. The sentry was disturbed only by the visit of the officer of the day, who had the task of inspecting the guard.

Could Quickly Destroy Juarez.

El Paso, Texas.—On the crest of a hill which rises above El Paso, designated as Keen Place, and situated at the base of Mount Franklin, are stationed four quick-firing field pieces. Since June 27 they have been there, trained on the city of Juarez, four miles away, across the Rio Grande. Until October 1st it will be the work of Captain Julius Berman, of Company C, Thirty-first regiment, to guard these weapons. No civilian is allowed to approach them and they are in constant readiness for action. When the mobilization order was issued, June 19, a company of artillery was ordered to place these guns in position and to sight them that their fire, if any, would be directed into the city across the river. Each one throws a 60-pound projectile four miles, and it is said in action they would be able to destroy the Juarez water and electric plants, and both international bridges in fewer than 10 minutes.

At the annual meeting of the Michigan Bean Growers' association held at Grand Rapids jointly with the annual meeting of the Michigan Bean Jobbers' association, it was practically decided to establish as the standard price for October $5 a bushel for beans. It was also recommended that an addition of over 10 or 15 cents a bushel be added later in the season for storage and handling charges.

Infantile paralysis cases took a decided drop in the reports received at the office of the state board of health, only four new cases being sent in. These came one each from River Rouge, Sandusky, Marquette and Sunfield townships, Eaton county.

"The boy martyr" of St. Mary's hospital at Grand Rapids, is dead. He was Clarence Chlebek, 18 years old, who was constantly in pain for four years before his death. The boy was hurt four years ago and a disease of the bones resulted.

Pottor Sabia, of Chicago, has just completed a religious census of Ypsilanti, made under the direction of Rev. William Heilmann, of St. Luke's church. His records show that there are 1,529 families in Ypsilanti and that 1,287 of these families are regular or occasional church attendants.

CRUSHING BLOWS STRUCK BY SERBS

MACEDONIA IS IN THE GRAVEST PERIL.

SERBS CAPTURE FLORINA

Led By Their King, Prince Alexander
the Serbs Have Been Leaping
From One Victory to Another.

London.—The entire Bulgarian right wing in Macedonia is in the gravest peril of being captured or annihilated by the Franco-Russo-Serb forces forming the Allies' left wing. Monastir, the chief Bulgarian base of support in Macedonia is menaced by an iron ring which is swiftly drawing tighter and tighter, threatening to throttle the defending army in its clutch. Florina, the southern gate to Monastir, 17 miles away, was formally occupied by the French in a dashing assault that swept the Bulgarians from their last positions in the town. The Bulgarians were driven into a wild rout not only here but to the west and southwest of Monastir as well, where the Serbs inflicted crushing defeats on them, taking by storm the first and second Bulgarian defense lines.

A dispatch from Athens reported the Bulgarians surrounded by the Franco-Serbian troops. "The Bulgarians are falling back precipitately on Monastir," added the message. General Sarraill's headquarters report in announcing the capture of Florina stated that the Bulgarians are "retreating in disorder in the direction of Monastir." Another dispatch places the pursuers on the Drama-Kendall (Kenali) line, at the nearest point only nine miles south of Monastir. The Franco-Russian left, at Resna, 38 miles northwest of Monastir, threatens to sweep down upon the city at any moment, co-operating with the French and Serbs advancing from the south and west.

All dispatches from the Macedonian front, official and unofficial, show that the campaign to reconquer Serbia has begun in earnest. Glowing praise is paid by General Sarraill to the dash and gallantry of the Serbs. Led by their prospective king, Prince Alexander, they have been leaping from one victory to another since the very moment the heir-apparent himself fired the opening gun.

Kirk's inability to accept the primary nomination.

ABOUT PENSION CLAIMS

Guardsmen May Have Signed Their Rights Away.

Grayling, Mich.—As a result of the National Guard being called into the service of the United States, a new code of pension law will be brought into existence within a few years in the belief of Gen. Kirk. Right now, all over the United States, regular army officers are engaged in a battle of wits with the men who are being mustered out and who are regarded as possible pensioners. Here at Grayling, for instance, when men come from El Paso to be mustered out, part of the formality is to present them with the statement for their signature which is meant to block further applications for pensions. This statement says that the signer is in as good health as when he enlisted, and that he has not had any sickness.

"So far as I know," said Maj. Wells, "only one man out of 200 who were mustered out here has a clear case for a pension."

"I do not remember that any man has failed to sign the statement that he is in good health as he had been before enlistment and that he has not been sick. The men are not obliged to sign those statements. We simply put them up to them in order to safeguard the government from unjust pension claims. There is no penalty for refusal to sign."

Eight days will be consumed enroute, the soldiers will stay three days at Camp Eabry, and eight days will be sent in the return to San Antonio. After that the Wisconsin, Illinois, Kansas, Texas and Missouri guardsmen in the division or expected to be as fit for service in the field as the regular army-men.

CARRANZA TROOPS PURSUE BANDITS

SEVERAL HUNDRED BODIES OF

VILLA THREE MILES AWAY

Four Separate Attacks Were Launched Against Chihuahua After the People Retired For the Night.

Chihuahua City, Mexico.—Forces of government soldiers have been detailed to bring order out of the chaos created by Villa's Hidalgo day attack upon the state capital. Several hundred bodies of men and animals have been removed from the streets and buried outside the city. Buildings which suffered from gunfire are being dynamited. Scores of workmen are engaged in restoring the city's telephone and telegraphic communications. Eighty prisoners taken in the engagement have been executed. These include M. Chao, formerly Villa's chief of staff, and Mariano Tames, who, as a colonel in Juarez, recently attempted unsuccessfully to induce the garrison there to revolt.

The federal and municipal districts suffered most heavily in the engagement, huge trees in the plaza being literally stripped of their limbs by the steady stream of lead poured through them. The bandits rode their horses inside the palaces and tore from their hangings costly tapestries, paintings and mirrors. Furniture was broken into splinters and doors pulled from their hinges.

Although numerous rumors were current that the city was to be attacked the report was not generally credited. After the engagement, it developed that, throughout the night before, Villa's men had been concocted about the outskirts of the town, listening to the moriment of the independence day celebration and awaiting the signal to attack.

Four separate attacks were launched at the town after its residents had retired for the night. In a drizzling rain, just before dawn, the outlaws crept from their hiding places and closed in on the Carranza sentries. One force made for the penitentiary, where the release of the prisoners was effected. Another force attempted to seize the recently arrived artillery, a third made for the palace, apparently in an attempt to seize ammunition stores believed to have been concealed there. The fourth column attacked a school house used as a barracks.

Prisoners taken in the engagement said that they were led by Villa, Martin Lopez, and the substitute chiefs, Uribe, Tarango, Murga and Padilla and that all but Villa participated actively in the fighting. The bandit leader, on a hill three miles to the northwest was seen with field glasses by officers of the garrison.

TWO DIE IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Auto Swerved Into Ditch.

Saginaw—Geo. Gramlich, proprietor of the Center house at Bridgeport, and M. E. Allen, of Chicago, in charge of the bar of the Hotel Bancroft, were instantly killed about seven and a half miles west of the city limits on the Gratiot road September 13. The men were speeding in Gramlich's big touring car. The auto suddenly swerved, turned over three times and struck the ditch a wreck. The two men were hurled about 30 feet in the air and when a farmer got to them both were dead.

9,335 SLEEPER'S PLURALITY

In The State.

Lansing—Albert E. Sleeper, of Bad Axe, won the Republican nomination for governor in the recent primaries by a plurality of 9,335 over Frank B. Leland, of Detroit, according to the official canvass. The total vote cast in the Republican primary—284,640—is the largest ever cast at a primary in this state. The Republican gubernatorial vote in 1914 was 202,175. The vote for governor on the Republican ticket follows: Sleeper, 99,938; Leland, 90,283; Diekema, 43,741; Gardner, 40,631; Wessells, 10,160. Henry Ford received 137 votes on the Republican ticket.

SUMMARY OF IMPORTANT HAPPENINGS IN FAR OFF NORTHLAND.

Resume of the Most Important Events in Sweden, Norway and Denmark—Of Interest to the Scandinavians in America.

NORWAY.

The Norwegians are using part of the riches which they are piling up during the war as a means of gaining the control of industrial establishments which had been started by foreign capitalists. One of the most noted of such establishments is the Hordaland factories, near Sarpsborg. It is realized that such concerns breed a lot of workmen who are not patriotic Norwegians. The Hordaland property is really a thorn in the flesh of liberty-loving Norwegians. The people of the community have mustered a handsome majority against the saloon of the place. But the English proprietors have always been backed by the courts of Norway to the effect that the Hordaland liquor license is a "vested right" which cannot be taken away unless the one who holds it is willing to let it go. If the Norwegians obtain a majority of the stocks of the company it seems to be a foregone conclusion that the will of the people of the community shall prevail with regard to this saloon. The property includes vast forests and must be worth $10,000,000 or $12,000,000.

Dr. Anton Nystrom, a noted Swedish pacifist, has been visiting in Norway for the purpose of ascertaining the manner in which King Karl XII of Sweden was killed at the fortress of Fredriksten, Norway, 200 years ago. Doctor Nystrom agrees with those who claim that the great war-king was assassinated by a Frenchman, and some Swedes. This is an old story, and does not call for any special comment. But the picture which he draws of the character of King Karl XII is certainly enough to stagger any good Swede. According to Doctor Nystrom King Karl was no hero; he was the worst king that Sweden ever had; and his memory does not deserve to be honored by the Swedish people. And his "marauding trip" into Norway should be forgotten, the sooner the better. Therefore his monument at Fredriksten should be removed.

The people of Norway are taking an interest in the tilling of the soil which no one expected a few years ago. According to an old saying "to cultivate the soil is to worship God." As a matter of fact, there are thousands of Norwegians who are taking to the tilling of the soil with something like a religious enthusiasm. In some schools it is almost a craze. But the hard-headed business men of the country are also backing the movement. A bank has been established for the special benefit of people who want to buy lots or farms. It is financially backed by the communes. Bonds have been offered to the amount of $5,000,000. The investments are perfectly safe, for the bank is controlled by the national government. The government is encouraging the investment of the estates of minors in this bank.

The house rent is still climbing in the Norwegian capital. As a striking proof of the situation it is mentioned that a man has advertised in the newspapers that he is willing to pay upwards of $500 a year for a suite of four or five rooms. Such advertisements are of course a great encouragement to house owners, who are ready to squeeze the last penny they can get out of their tenants.

Oscar Mathiesen, the Norwegian champion skater, is going to visit America next winter. He will be here some time before the opening of the season, in order to become familiar with the ways of the people of the new world. He admits that he expects to find a number of worthy competitors. His family will remain in Norway, and he expects to return home next spring.

SWEDEN.

Plans have been perfected for making charcoal out of peat, according to a method which has proved successful in Germany. The finished product is really a special kind of coke, which, however, produces just as much heat as the best coal. Three pounds of peat will make about one pound of coke, and a number of valuable by-products. The cost of a plant large enough to make it pay is about $80,000, which is considered reasonable.

Sweden exported 30,000 reapers and mowers to Russia last summer, and it is expected that this number will be trebled next year. Sweden also exported 700 tons of binding twine during the past season. Tractors for farm work are also exported to Russia by the hundred.

The parish of Tarna was recently visited by a hailstorm which did much damage. The hailstones were as large as plums, and it took three days of very warm weather to thaw out the biggest sizes of them.

The health of Queen Victoria permitted her to leave Germany for Sweden August 2, and she was to spend some time at the Sollden summer palace.

The value of the crops of Sweden are put at about $200,000,000 a year, but this year's crops are said to be worth about twice this amount.

The king has granted permission to take up a collection in every church in the country for the purchase of Bibles for the army and navy.

To make clothes out of peat would seem to be a forlorn traffic. But a Swede has actually turned this trick, and at least five persons in Sweden are known to be wearing peat clothes. In fact the invention was made 20 years ago by Ernst Fograeus, a Gothenburg engineer. But the invention was at that time considered worthless because peat clothing proved to be too expensive. Now the price of textiles has mounted to such heights that the proposition seems more reasonable than it did 20 years ago. The natural color of the fibers is very beautiful. One of the five holding the distinction of wearing peat clothing is Dr. H. von Feltzen of Jonkoping, who says he is well pleased with the garment.

Johannes Danielsson, a farmer at Galmus, Vestervik, celebrated his nineteenth birthday July 26, surrounded by his family and other relatives and friends. What made the event so interesting, however, was the fact that on the same day he had to swing his scythe in a heavy field of clover. Those who were present got the impression that he may run his farm for years to come.

The Swedish fishermen who went to Iceland last spring made a magnificent haul. The government food commission bought the fish, and the ships were ready to take the goods to Sweden when England threatened to take everything at a price of a little over five cents a pound. The whole catch amounted to about 125,000 barrels of herring.

Such a large number of gravestones are found in the island of Gotland that it is proposed to save them by collecting them in a museum to be built for that purpose. It is said that if nothing is done to preserve them many of them will be destroyed in the near future.

DENMARK.

There are about 2,500,000 acres of tillable land in Denmark, mostly cut up in small farms, of which those of between 35 and 40 acres predominate. Now the farmers have co-operative creameries in all districts and butter producing has become a great industry. About 83 per cent of the small farms and their cattle are affiliated with the co-operative creameries and about the same percentage of cattle is registered under this co-operative movement. The 1,200 creameries of Denmark are centrally located at railway stations and the co-operators or owners elect a head and choose a manager. Denmark has 1,000,000 milk cows. The co-operators employ a trained man to travel from farm to farm and test the milk and find out the per cent of fat and suggest changes of breed to increase the fat contents. For the purchase of food bulls there are associations known as cattle-breeding unions. There are almost 1,000 of these with more than 280,000 cows. The government contributed $30,000 in 1915 to this association. There are half a dozen butchery export unions and butler, worth $12,000,000, was exported through them in 1914. Danish butter is sold on the English market under a standard mark, "The Dannebrog," which is protected by law and if a Danish creamery does not conform with the standard prescribed by the state the right to carry the mark upon its butter is taken away. There is also a co-operative slaughterhouse to which 142,000 farmers belong in Denmark today. The government spends annually $80,000 for meat inspection. Fourteen co-operative Danish slaughterhouses own the Danish Bacon company of London, and in 1915, 519,000 pigs were sold by this firm for $39,000,000. Denmark's egg output is largely in the hands of the Danish co-operative egg export and of slaughterhouses. It is required by law to have the date of laying of the egg stamped on each egg, together with the name of the egg producer. Ten million dollars worth of eggs were exported in 1915. The trust formed this year to control the importation of fertilizing agents was quickly and effectively killed by the Danish Co-operative Manure society, to which 98 per cent of the Danish farmers belong.

So much fresh fish was taken to Lemvig a few days ago that it was impossible to pack it all down for shipping. Some of it was taken to neighboring towns. But that did not improve the situation much, for a regular ice famine was on. Norway is supposed to be a dependable source, but even this failed. To show the anomaly of the situation it may be mentioned that some ice was shipped in from Hamburg, the great commercial mart of northern Germany.

The government hired experts to study the coal problem in the Faroe islands, but the result was unsatisfactory. The best coal mines are in Sudero, but they are so poor that it will not pay to develop the mines for shipping beyond the neighborhood.

The farmers in the vicinity of Aars are complaining bitterly about the damage done by foxes. It has happened that a fox would come in the middle of the day and help himself to half a dozen chickens, and this is rather expensive fox-hunting. The right to hunt in that part of the country belongs to the county of Lindenberg, and in former years a regular fox hunt took place once a year. But the foxes have been neglected on account of the war, and now they are becoming regular pests.

In resolutions adopted the legislature at St. Thomas, D. W. I., urged the Danish government to sell the United States as speedily as possible to end present uncertainty. The resolutions which were adopted unanimously were cable to the finance minister of Denmark at Copenhagen.

Many farmers in the country around Skovbo have succeeded in keeping down the fly pest in their barns by leaving the windows open so that swallows can build nests in the barns.

Second Coming of Christ

By REV. JAMES M. GRAY, D. D.
Dean of Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

TEXT—Waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ.—1 Cor. 1:7.

There is unusual interest at this time in the second coming of Christ, and many are the inquiries as to what it means and when it may take place.

The importance of the subject from the divine point of view is seen in that it is alluded to over 800 times in the New Testament. Indeed perhaps there is no doctrine of Christianity dwelt upon to such an extent as this, unless it be the fundamental one of our redemption through the cross.

What Does It Mean?

The second coming of Christ means a personal, in the sense of a visitor reappearing of one Lord on this earth. Such seems to be the teaching of his own words when, in the presence of the high priest he said: "Hereafter shall ye see the son of man sitting on the right hand of power and coming in the clouds of heaven." This is recorded in the 26th of Matthew at the 64th verse. The angels taught the same truth to the disciples on the Mount of Olives when they said, "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye here looking up into heaven? which is taken up to heaven as ye have seen him go into heaven." This is recorded in Acts 1:11. And finally in the last book of the Bible, we find John exclaiming, "Behold, he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him: and all kindreds of the earth shall wall because of him. Even so, amen."

When Will It Take Place?

This doctrine has been brought into disrepute because many have assumed to fix dates for the coming of our Lord, notwithstanding that the Bible warns against it. Jesus himself said to his disciples: "Watch, therefore, for ye know not what hour our Lord doth come." There are some who think that a millennium of peace and prosperity will be experienced on the earth before the Lord comes, but such a belief seems in contradiction to his command to watch. It also seems to contradict the teachings of his parables concerning his second coming, and especially that of the nobleman in the 19th of Luke.

There is also one other fact that seems to preclude the expectation of a millennium before Jesus comes; that is, what the New Testament teaches us to the moral and spiritual conditions in the world at the end of this age. We are all familiar with the teaching of Paul in his second epistle to Timothy at the third chapter, where he says that "in the last days perilous times shall come." He then goes on to define what he means by that, adding that "men shall be lovers of self, lovers of money, boastful, haughty, railers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholly, without natural affection, truce-breakers, slanderers, without self-control, fierce, no lovers of good, traitors, high-spirited, big-minded, lovers of pleasure rather than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof." All this does not look like a millennium, and yet how much it looks like the times in which we are now living! Can it be therefore that the coming of the Lord may be nearer than most of us expect?

Results of His Coming.

In the light of the second coming there are three classes of men to be considered, which are defined in First Corinthians at the 10th chapter—as the Jew, the Gentile, and the church of God. To begin with the last-named, the coming of Christ will mean the translation of the church to meet him in the air, according to First Thessalonians 4:13-18. It would seem to be after this translation that Christ comes with his saints and his angels to the earth, as indicated in the Scriptures previously referred to. This coming is for judgment on the Gentile nations which "know not God and obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ." It will be also the day of tribulation for the Jewish people such as they have never known, but not of which a faithful remnant will be delivered and become the nucleus of the kingdom of God on the earth. This seems to be the teaching of many places in the Old and New Testament, but especially in the second chapter of Daniel.

Bringing the Truth Home.

This hope of the second coming of Christ is the great motive for holy living. Where it really takes hold of the hearts of Christians it restrains them from known sin as nothing else does.

It is also the great comfort in disappointment and trial, for our Lord said that when he came again in the glory of his father he would bring his reward with him. Hence what a stimulus to holy endeavor in the face of difficulties and discouragements, for—

No word he hath spoken
Was ever yet broken.

Finally, how the thought of his coming should move men to repentance and faith in his name! O, these solemn words which Paul spoke to the unbelievers and mockers in Athens: "God now commandeth all men everywhere to repent; because he hath appointed a day in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained, whereof he hath given assurance unto all men in that he hath raised him from the dead."

CAR TO DO IMPORTANT WORK

PENNSYLVANIA RAILROAD HAS NEW CLEARANCE CAR.

Designed for Important Work in Obtaining Measurements of Distances From Track to Projections—Can Operate Day or Night.

A new clearance car has just been placed in service on the Pennsylvania railroad lines east of Pittsburgh and Erie. It is being run over every division as rapidly as possible in order to secure correct measurements of the distances from the track to projecting portions of station buildings, tunnels, bridges and other objects. It is also designed to indicate automatically while moving on curves the elevation of the rails and the degree of curvature.

The car is built entirely of steel, and is equipped with alphas, steam fittings and electric lights. There are two floors, or elevations, both of them used for taking measurements from the temples. Clearances are computed from the center of the wheel track, over which the main temple is erected. From an elevation of 12 feet above the top of the rails the temple tapers up toward the middle of the car at an angle of 45 degrees.

Immediately in front of the temple is an auxiliary temple designed to measure overhead bridges, tunnels and other objects between elevations 17 and 20 feet above the top of the rails. This temple is capable of being raised to a height of 18 feet by a crank and a ratchet arrangement on the floor of the car. Enclosed in steel cylindrical boxes with translucent glass fronts facing the temples is a series of electric lights which extend from the floor of the car on each side to a height of 15 feet. Light from these makes it possible to take measurements both day and night.

Attached to the feelers and the side of the temple are graduated scales which indicate automatically the distance from the rim of the temple to a side or overhead object. In addition, a small board equipped with a set of feelers spaced one inch apart has been provided to measure cornices of roofs, or shelter sheds, or other irregular objects.—From Popular Science Monthly.

Big Ferry.

Railroad car ferry service is now running between Key West and Havana operated by the Peninsula and Occidental Steamship line. This car ferry has facilities for carrying 30 standard size American freight cars and furnishes a daily service between the ports. Freight in full carload lots is handled expeditiously and safely. Sugar and molasses cars are loaded at the Cuban mills and forwarded through to destination, while heavy machinery from the United States is loaded at the place of manufacture and carried through to its Cuban destination without transfer. The handling of fruit and vegetables for the northern markets has also been greatly facilitated by this service.

Fewer Idle Freight Cars. On July 1 the net surplus of freight cars on the railroads of the United States and Canada was $2,116, as compared with $5,224 on June 1. With the exception of the latter date, July 1 shows the largest surplus this year, these returns having shown a net shortage as recently as March 1.

The following table gives the total surplus and shortages of all classes of cars as reported each month this year:

Railroaders Long in Service. Of the engineers assigned to the Black Diamond express of the Lehigh Valley road, when it was instituted, 20 years ago, four are still in active service. Two have been promoted and five have left the service. Thomas Farley is still on the same run and has missed few trips. The three conductors originally chosen to serve on the express are still at this work.

To Lessen Smoke Nuisance. To lessen the smoke nuisance an inventor proposes drawing locomotive smoke beneath the engine and molting it so that the soot and cinders drop to the ground.

According to Inquiries. "It's wrong of me to take this food," said the tramp, as he reached out for the pie in the window; "but," he added, reflectively, "I've had repeated injuries for it from the department of the interior, and I shall now deliver 'be goods.'"

LINK GREECE WITH EUROPE

Last Strip of Line Necessary for the Connection Has Been Put Into Place.

It is interesting to report the completion of the remaining strip of unconstructed road necessary to the final linking up of Greece with the rest of Europe, writes Consul General Veddlid from Athens. This gap of some 50 miles has at last been closed and the stretch of new roadway was thrown open to traffic in May of this year.

The result of the completion of this work to Greece can hardly be overestimated. As soon as the war is ended, through trains will be run from Paris and other European capitals to Athens-Piraeus. The time from Paris will be shortened to some 60 hours. It is thought, and through dining and sleeping cars of the Compagnie Internationale des Wagons Lits et des Grands Express Europeens will run over the lines. This hitherto missing link in communication between Greece and the Saloniki-Monastir line, and Pannapoli, on the Thessalonian frontier. Temporary bridges of wood will span streams and valleys until permanent steel and concrete structures replace them after the war. Twenty powerful American locomotives, now ready at Athens, will draw these trains at high speed through the picturesque Vistritza valley and along the Aegean coast to their destination.

WAS FIRST AMERICAN LINE

Ground Broken for the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Some Eighty-eight Years Ago.

The first railroad system in North America, the Baltimore and Ohio, when its beginning 88 years ago, when ground was broken at Baltimore. The fourth of July of that year was a memorable one in the Maryland metropolis, and all business was suspended, while men from all over the state took part in the parade.

The ground-breaking ceremony was conducted by Charles Carroll of Carrollton, the last survivor of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, who was then ninety-two years old. As he drove the spade into the earth the venerable statesman exclaimed: "I consider this among the most important acts of my life, second only to that of signing the Declaration of Independence, if second even to that." The city of Baltimore and the state of Maryland each contributed half a million dollars toward the construction of the railroad. Horses were used at first to draw the cars, and the first American-built locomotive was constructed by Peter Cooper for this line. The railroad was developed out of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal company, which in turn had its origin in the Potomac company, of which Washington was the first president.

Early in June a windstorm of such extraordinary violence swept over central Illinois that it blew the Chicago-St. Louis Midnight special—five cars and a locomotive—off the track. The railroad was developed out of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal company, which in turn had its origin in the Potomac company, of which Washington was the first president.

Wind-Swept Railroad. Early in June a windstorm of such extraordinary violence swept over central Illinois that it blew the Chicago-St. Louis Midnight special—five cars and a locomotive—off the track. The railroad was developed out of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal company, which in turn had its origin in the Potomac company, of which Washington was the first president.

Strength Test. A party of English officers serving at the Dardanelles made a wager one day as to which smelled the louder, a goat or a Turk. To settle the wager a goat was brought into the colonnade, and the colonel fainting. When the colonel was revived they brought a Turk into the tent, and the goat fainting.

Uncle Eben. "Do man dat's allus sayin' what he'd said if he was in somebody else's place," said Uncle Eben, "mos' generally ain't doin' nuffin' much on his own account."

Unfeeling World. My little boy was heartbroken over the death of his beloved kitty. I let him ask his little playmates and have a funeral, which they made quite impressive with music and flowers. In the afternoon, to divert his mind, I took him out in town, but he was sadder and thoughtful. After passing a place of amusement he said, "Mam ma, everything is going on just the same as if Tottie hadn't died."—Chicago Tribune.

Money Vinegar. Vinegar made from honey has an exceptionally fine flavor and is not expensive. A small amount of honey furnishes a large amount of vinegar. Follow these directions: Dissolve thoroughly in two gallons of warm, soft water one quart jar of extracted honey. Give it air and keep it in a warm place where it will ferment and make excellent vinegar.

Truth Better Than Flattery. The friend who always reflects our moods and confirms our judgment of ourselves is more dangerous than an enemy; for the truth is a tonic even when it is flung at us as a missile, and commendation which we do not deserve fastens attention on the weakness which it attempts to conceal.—Selected.

Perfection Not Wanted. A New York judge who refused a man a divorce sought because "his wife was imperfect in everything," said to the fellow: "If you are a perfect human being, or think you are, watch your step. A perfect human being," continued the justice, still bringing the head of the man, "would be an intolerable nuisance."

Beat to Wind Watch in Morning. Winding is the food of watch. It is its life-blood, and upon it every movement of the works depends. The time-keeping value of a watch depends less upon its cost than upon the care that is taken of it by its owner. If wound in the morning instead of at night it will keep much better time.

Too Much. "Why must you always go out every time one of my woman friends calls?" "Well, my dear," responded her husband, "I am glad to meet her friends. But you must remember that I have heard the story of your Atlantic City trip about seventeen times now."—Indianapolis Star.

Chile's Nitrate Fields. The great nitrate fields of Chile lie from fifty to a hundred miles inland, at an elevation of 2,000 feet or more above sea level. They parallel the shore for more than 400 miles, a lifeless waste, devoid of any scrap of vegetation.

May Be Good at Heavy Work. It is difficult to get much spirituality in a man whose mind automatically concentrates upon corned beef and cabbage.—Houston Post.

EAT LESS AND TAKE SALTS FOR KIDNEYS

Take a glass of Salts before breakfast if your Back hurts or Bladder bothers you.

The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out; they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health. When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, bladder weakness and a general decline in health, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders. Bad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

Her Duties. "You advertised as chauffeurette-maid?" Applicant for Situation. "Yes, madame." "What were your duties at your last place?" "I drove and cleaned the cars single-handed." "And is a maid?" "I took down my lady at night and assembled her in the morning, madame."—Punch.

Daily Thought. Pain and despair and heartache can you down for awhile, but afterward they help you to understand.—John Oliver Hobbes.

First Fireworks in Europe. Fireworks are said to have been first used in Europe in the city of Florence in 1360.

Modern Formula. "Duty calls, madame!" "Ah! Just say that I am out."—Judge.

Optimistic Thought. Labor is the foundation of wealth of every country.

Start Tomorrow and Keep It Up Every Morning

Get in the habit of drinking a glass of hot water before breakfast.

We're not here long, so let's make our stay agreeable. Let us live well, eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, and look well. What a glorious condition to attain, and yet, how very easy it is if one will only adopt the morning water habit.

Folks who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter. Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the water and phosphate is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble; others who have hollow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of inside-bathing before breakfast.

COMB SAGE TEA IN HAIR TO DARKEN IT

It's Grandmother's Recipe to keep her Locks Dark, Glossy, Beautiful.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Sometimes, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

School Notes

Miss Pearsall has organized a girls' glee club in the high school.

The A class of the sixth grade have made a good start in decimal fractions.

"The Children's Hour" by Longfellow, is being committed to memory by the B division of the fourth grade.

For paper cutting and construction work the second and third graders of the South side are making an Indian village.

The story of Hiawatha is of interest to the first grade boys and girls just at the present time.

Kenneth Johnson, Edward Waldron and Belle Maxon are new pupils in the high school. The first mentioned had all of his expenses paid to the state fair, as a reward for writing the best set of papers at the county eighth grade examination last spring.

The fourth grade are enjoying a few stories from Greek history.

The first grade is learning the poem, "September," by Helen Hunt Jackson. The new piano in the high school is not only a beautiful instrument to look upon, but it also has plenty of volume and a tone of good quality.

Mr. Beam and Mr. Atchison from Battery B of the Mobilization Camp, were visitors in the high school Tuesday.

Owing to the large number of pupils in the first grade it was found necessary to transfer the A class of eleven pupils to the second grade. We shall now consider them as the C class of the second grade. Miss Clark still has an enrollment of 59. No more beginners can be admitted into either first grade until the second semester.

Roy Case was recently elected captain of the foot ball team.

The Sophomore class has organized with the following officers: president, Virginia Bingham; vice president, Percy Felling; secretary, Hazel Cassidy; treasurer, Nina Petersen.

Large Crowd Hear Dry Lectures.

The stereopticon lecture at the M. E. church, Tuesday night in the interest of state wide prohibition was so well attended, that chairs had to be placed in the front and rear part of the church. While a large majority of the audience was composed of women and children, still there were many men present.

Dr. D. Ostlund, a native of Sweden, who had spent the past 17 years in temperance work in Iceland, was the first speaker. He confined his talk principally to the wet and dry question, and said but little about Iceland, as had been expected after reading his advertising.

He was followed by C. E. Dowdell, dry manager for the counties of Cheboygan, Otsego and Crawford. Dowdell is an ex-saloon keeper and puglist. He told of his experiences in the saloon business and recited a history of his parents, sisters and brothers, who in almost all cases were disgraced or filled drunkards' graves. His talk was illustrated by stereopticon pictures. At the conclusion of the lectures a collection was taken up and pledges of financial support received. Mr. Dowdell is scheduled to speak again Grayling before the close of the campaign.

Next week, Tuesday evening, Mrs. Etta Shaw, of Ohio, will speak on the dry side at the M. E. church. On Wednesday evening she will speak at the Centre Plains school house and Thursday evening at the Beaver Creek school house. Later in the week Mrs. Shaw will speak in Frederic, Deword and Maple Forest.

Methodist Episcopal Church Notes.

Services will be resumed on Sunday next in the M. E. church Grayling. Rev. A. Mitchell, who has been in the field in Grayling for two years, has been appointed by the Bishop to succeed himself for another year. Rev. Mitchell will preach Sunday morning and evening at the usual time—10:30 a. m. and 7 o'clock p. m. Everybody heartily invited and welcome.

There is one side of the war that does not seem to have been discussed by the press of the country. What a wonderful avenue it opens up for the "White Slave Trust." Too many of us do not realize that there is such a trust, but a glance at almost any city newspaper will reveal the fact that thousands of our innocent girls are being drawn into this gigantic whirlpool of vice every year. The hundreds of young girls, who are left fatherless and brotherless by the great strife abroad, will be easy prey for the vultures who barter womanly virtue on the altar of profit. Too many of us have never familiarized ourselves with their methods. Every father and mother in this city should see "The Girl without a Chance," which appears at the Grayling Opera house, one night only, Friday, September 22, and learn some of the inside workings of this hideous traffic, which has flourished for many years in our midst. Every girl should see it, so that she may avoid a fate similar to that suffered by the heroine of this wonderful life story. Remember this is not a moving picture. Positively no children under 16 years admitted.

Duane has just escaped into the wilderness from a posse intent on lynching him.

The Rio Grande and its tributaries for the most of their length in Texas ran between wide, low, flat lands covered by a dense growth of willow, cottonwood, mesquite, prickly pear, and other growths mingled with the willow, and altogether they made a matted, tangled copse, a thicket that an inexperienced man would have considered impenetrable.

The depths of this brake Duane had penetrated was a silent, dreary, strange place. In the middle of the day the light was weird and dim. When a breeze fluttered the foliage, then slender shafts and spears of sunshine pierced the green mantle and danced like gold on the ground.

Duane had always felt the strangeness of this kind of place, and likewise he had felt a protecting, hushing something which always seemed to him to be the sympathy of the brake for a hunted creature. Any unwounded creature, strong and resourceful, was safe when he had glided under the low, rustling green roof of this wild cover.

Duane wanted to cross the river if that was possible, and, keeping in the brake, work his way upstream till he had reached country more hospitable. He pushed on. His left arm had to be favored, as he could scarcely move it. Using his right to spread the willows, he slipped sideways between them and made fast time. Finally after a toilsome penetration of still denser brush he broke through to the bank of the river.

He faced a wide, shallow, muddy stream with brakes on the opposite bank extending like a green and yellow wall. Duane perceived at a glance the futility of his trying to cross at this point. Everywhere the sluggish water loved quicksand bars. Before leaving the bank he tied his hat upon a pole and lifted enough water to quench his thirst. Then he worked his way back to where thinner growth made advancement easier, and kept on upstream till the shadows were so deep he could not see. Feeling around for a place big enough to stretch out on, he lay down. For the time being he was as safe there as he would have been in the Rio Rock. He was tired, though not exhausted, and in spite of the throbbing pain in his arm he dropped at once into sleep.

CHAPTER XIII.

How long Duane was traveling out of that region he never knew. But he reached familiar country and found a rancher who had before befriended him. Here his arm was attended to; he had food and sleep; and in a couple of weeks he was himself again.

When the time came for Duane to ride away on his endless trail his friend reluctantly imparted the information that some thirty miles south, near the village of Shirley, there was posted at a certain crossroad a reward for Buck Duane dead or alive Duane had heard of such notices, but he had never seen one. His friend's reluctance and refusal to state for what particular deed this reward was offered roused Duane's curiosity. Abruptly he decided to ride over there and find out who wanted him dead or alive, and why.

Toward afternoon, from the top of a long hill, Duane saw the green fields and trees and shining roofs of a town he considered must be Shirley. And at the bottom of the hill he came upon an intersecting road. There was a placard nailed on the cross-road signpost. Duane drew rein near it and leaned close to read the faded print. "REWARD FOR BUCK DUANE DEAD OR ALIVE." Feeling closer to read the finer, more faded print, Duane learned that he was wanted for the murder of Mrs. Jeff Aiken at her ranch near Shirley. The month September was named, but the duty was illegible. The reward was offered by the woman's husband, whose name appeared with that of a sheriff's at the bottom of the placard.

Duane read the thing twice. When he straightened he was sick with the horror of his fate, wild with passion at those misguided fools who could believe that he had harmed a woman. A dark, passionate fury possessed him. It shook him like a storm shakes the oak. When it passed, leaving him cold, with clouded brow and piercing eye, his mind was set. Spurring his horse, he rode straight toward the village.

Shirley appeared to be a large, pretentious country town. A branch of some railroad terminated there. The main street was wide, bordered by trees and commodious houses, and many of the stores were of brick. A large plaza shaded by giant cottonwood occupied a central location.

Duane pulled his running horse and halted him, plunging and snorting, before a group of idle men who lounged on benches in the shade of a spreading cottonwood. How many times had Duane seen just that kind of lazy shirt-sleeved Texas group! Not often, however, had he seen such placid, loitering, good-natured men change their expression, their attitude, so swiftly. His advent apparently was momentous. They evidently took him for an unusual visitor. So far as Duane could tell, not one of them recognized him, had a hint of his identity.

He slid off his horse and threw the bridle.

"I'm Buck Duane," he said. "I saw that placard—out there on a sign-post. It's a damn lie! Somebody find this man Jeff Aiken. I want to see him."

His announcement was taken in absolute silence. That was the only effect he noted, for he avoided looking at these villagers. The reason was simple enough; Duane felt himself overcome with emotion. There were tears in his eyes. He sat down on a bench, put his elbows on his knees and his hands to his face. For once he had absolutely no concern for his fate. This ignominy was the last straw.

Presently, however, he became aware of some kind of commotion among these villagers. He heard whispering, low, hoarse voices, then the shuffle of rapid feet moving away. All at once a violent hand jerked his gun from his holster. When Duane rose a giant man, livid of face, shaking like a leaf, confronted him with his own gun.

"Hands up, that, you Buck Duane!" he roared, waving the gun.

That appeared to be the cue for pandemonium to break loose. Several men lay hold of his arms and plunged them behind his back. Resistance was useless. Even if Duane had had the spirit, one of them fetched his buttler from his saddle, and with this they bound him helpless.

People were running now from the street, the stores, the houses. Old men, cowboys, clerks, boys, ranchers came on the trot. The crowd grew. The increasing clamor began to attract women as well as men. A group of girls ran up, then hung back in fright and pity.

The presence of cowboys made a difference. They split up the crowd, got to Duane, and lay hold of him with rough, business-like hands. One of them lifted his fists and roared at the frenzied mob to fall back, to stop the racket. He beat them back into a circle; but it was some little time before the hubbub quieted down so a voice could be heard.

"—shut up, will you—all?" he was yelling. "Give us a chance to hear something. Easy now—soho. There ain't nobody got to be hurt. There's right; everybody quiet now. Let's see what's come off."

This cowboy, evidently one of authority, or at least one of strong personality, turned to the gaunt man, who still waved Duane's gun.

"Abe, put the gun down," he said. "It might go off. Here, give it to me. Now, what's wrong? Who's this rope-dancer, an' what's he done?"

The gaunt fellow, who appeared now about to collapse, lifted a shuffling hand and pointed.

"That thar feller—he's Buck Duane!" he panted.

An angry murmur ran through the surrounding crowd.

"The rope! The rope! Throw it over a branch! String him up!" cried an excited villager.

"Abe, how do you know this fellow is Buck Duane?" the cowboy asked, sharply.

"Why—he said so," replied the man called Abe.

"What!" came the exclamation, incredulously.

"It's a tarnation fact," panted Abe, waving his hand importantly. He was an old man and appeared to be carried away with the significance of his deed. "He like to rid his boss right over us-til. Then he jumped off, says he was Buck Duane, an' he wanted to see Jeff Aiken bad."

This speech caused a second commotion as noisy though not so enduring as the first. When the cowboy, assisted by a couple of his mates, had restored order again, someone slipped the nose-end of Duane's rope over his head.

"Up with him!" screamed a wild-eyed youth.

The mob surged closer was shoved back by the cowboys.

"Abe, if he's Buck Duane how'n hell did you get hold of his gun?" bluntnly queried the cowboy.

"Why—he set down thar—an' he kind of hid his face on his hand. An'

"How'n Hell Did You Get His Gun?"

I grabbed his gun an' got the drop on him."

What the cowboy thought of this was expressed in a laugh. His mates likewise grinned broadly. Then the leader turned to Duane.

"Stranger, I reckon you'd better speak up for yourself," he said.

That stilled the crowd as no command had done. "I'm Buck Duane, all right," said Duane, quietly. "It was this way—"

The big cowboy seemed to vibrate with a shock. All the ruddy warmth left his face; his jaw began to bulge; the corded veins in his neck stood out in knots. In an instant he had a hard, stern, strange look. He shot out a powerful hand that fastened in the front of Duane's blouse.

"Something queer here. But if you're Duane you're sure in bad. Any fool ought to know that. You mean it, then?"

"I'm Duane, yes. But I won't stand for the blame of things I never did. That's why I'm here. I saw that placard out there offering the reward. Until now I never was within half a day's ride of this town. I'm blamed for what I never did. I rode in here, told you I was, asked somebody to send for Jeff Aiken."

"An' then you set down an' let this old guy throw your own gun on you?" queried the cowboy in amazement.

"I guess that's it," replied Duane.

"Well, it's powerful strange, if you're really Buck Duane what do you want to see Aiken for?"

"I wanted to face him, to tell him I never harmed his wife."

"Suppose we send for Aiken an' he hears you an' doesn't believe you; what then?"

"If he won't believe me—why, then my case's so bad—I'd be better off dead."

A momentary silence was broken by Silbert.

"If this ain't a queer deal! Boys, reckon we'd better send for Jeff."

"Somebody went fer him. He'll be comin' soon," replied a man.

Duane stood a head taller than that circle of curious faces. He gazed out above and beyond them. It was in this way that he chanced to see a number of women on the outskirts of the crowd. Some were old, with hard faces, like the men. Some were young and comely, and most of these seemed agitated by excitement or distress. They cast fearful, pitying glances up on Duane as he stood there with that nose around his neck. Women were more human than men, Duane thought. He met eyes that dilated, seemed fascinated at his gaze, but were not averted. It was the old women who were votable, loud in expression of their feelings.

"Thar comes Jeff Aiken now," called a man, loudly.

The crowd shifted and, trampled in eagerness, Duane saw two men coming fast, one of whom, in the lead, was of stalwart build. He had a gun in his hand, and his manner was that of fierce energy.

The cowboy Silbert thrust open, the jostling circle of men.

"Hold on, Jeff," he called, and he blocked the man with the gun. He spoke so low Duane could not hear what he said, and his form hid Aiken's face.

At that juncture the crowd spread out, closed in, and Aiken and Silbert were caught in the circle. There was a pushing forward, a pressing of many bodies, hoarse cries and flinging hands—again the insane tumult was about to break out—the demand for an outlaw's blood, the call for wild justice executed a thousand times before on Texas' bloody soil.

Silbert belted at the dark encroaching mass. The cowboys with him leant and cuffed in vain.

"Jeff, will you listen?" broke in Silbert, harshly, his hands on the other man's arm.

Aiken nodded coolly. Duane, who had seen many men in perfect control of themselves under circumstances like these, recognized the spirit that dominated Aiken. He was white, cold, passionless. There were lines of bitter grief deep round his lips. If Duane ever felt the meaning of death he felt it then.

"Sure this 's your game, Aiken," said Silbert. "But hea, me a minute. I reckon you'd better hold on till you hear what he has to say."

Then for the first time the drawn, gaunt, hungry-eyed giant turned his gaze upon Duane. He had intelligence which was not yet subservient to passion. Moreover, he seemed the kind of man Duane would care to have judge him in a critical moment like this.

"Listen," said Duane, gravely, with his eyes steady on Aiken's. "I'm Buck Duane. I never lied to any man in my life. I was forced into outlawry. I've never had a chance to leave the country. I've killed men to save my own life. I rode thirty miles to-day—deliberately to see what this reward was, who made it, what for. When I read the placard I went sick to the bottom of my soul. So I rode it, here to find you—to tell you this: I never saw Shirley before to-day. It was impossible for me to have killed your wife. Last September I was two hundred miles north of here, on the upper Neeces. I can prove that. Men who know me will tell you I couldn't murder a woman. I haven't any idea why such a deed should be laid at my hands. It's just that wild border gossip. And see here, Aiken, you understand I'm a miserable man. I'm about broken, I guess. I don't care any more for life, for anything. If you can't look me in the eyes, man to man, and believe what I say—why, by God! you can kill me!"

Aiken heaved a great breath.

"Buck Duane, whether I'm impressed or not by what you say needn't matter. You've had accusers, justly or unjustly, as will soon appear. The thing is we can prove you innocent or guilty. My girl Lucy saw my wife's assailant."

He motioned for the crowd of men to open up.

"Somebody—you, Silbert—go for Lucy. That'll settle this thing."

Duane heard as a man in an ugly dream. The faces around him, the hum of voices, all seemed far off. His life hung by the merest thread. Yet he did not think of that so much as of the brand of a woman-murderer which might be soon sealed upon him by a frightened, imaginative child.

The crowd trooped apart and closed again. Duane caught a blurred image of a slight girl clinging to Silbert's arm. He could not see distinctly. Aiken lifted the child, whispered soothingly to her not to be afraid. Then he fetched her closer to Duane.

"Lucy, tell me. Did you ever see this man before?" asked Aiken, huskily and low. "Is he the one—who came in the house that day—struck your down—and dragged mama—?"

Aiken's voice failed.

A lightning flash seemed to clear Duane's blurred sight. He saw a pale, sad face and violent eyes fixed in gloom and horror upon his. No horrible moment in Duane's life ever equaled this one of silence—of suspense.

"It ain't him!" cried the child.

Then Silbert was flinging the noose of Duane's neck and unwinning the bonds round his arms. The spellbound crowd awoke to hoarse exclamations.

"See there, my loosed gents, how easy you'd hang the wrong man, now burst out the cowboy, as he made the rope-end hiss: "You-all are a lot of wise rangers. Haw! haw!"

He freed Duane and thrust the bone-handled gun back in Duane's holster.

"You Abe, there. Reckon you pulled a stunt! But don't try the like again. And men, I'll gamble there's a hell of a lot of bad work Buck Duane's power's got for—which all be ever done. Clear away there. Where's his boss? Duane, the rand's even out of Shirley."

Silbert swept the gawking watchers aside and pressed Duane toward the horse, which another cowboy held. Mechanically Duane mounted, felt a lift as he went up. Then the cowboy's hard face softened in a smile.

"I reckon it ain't unwill of me to say—lit that road quick!" he said, frankly.

He led the horse out of the crowd. Aiken joined him, and between them they escorted Duane across the plaza. The crowd appeared irresistibly drawn to follow.

Aiken paused with his big hand on Duane's knee. In it, unconsciously probably, he still held the gun.

"Duane, a word with you," he said. "I believe you're not so black as you've been painted. I wish there was time to say more. Tell me this, anyway. Do you know the Ranger Captain MacNelly?"

"I do not," replied Duane, in surprise.

"I met him only a week ago over in Fairfield," went on Aiken, hurriedly. "He declared you never killed my wife. I didn't believe him—argued with him. We almost had hard words over it. Now—I'm sorry. The last thing he said was: 'If you ever see Duane don't kill him. Send him into my camp after dark! He meant something strange. What—I can't say. But he was right, and I was wrong. If Lucy had had an eye I'd have killed you. Still, I wouldn't advise you to hunt up MacNelly's camp. He's clever. Maybe he believes there's no treachery in his new ideas of ranger tactics. I tell you for all it's worth. Good-by. May God help you further as he did this day!'"

Duane said good-by and touched the horse with his spurs.

"So long, Buck!" called Silbert, with that frank smile breaking warm over his brown face; and he held his sombrero high.

CHAPTER XIV.

When Duane reached the crossing of the roads the name Fairfield on the sign-post seemed to be the thing that tipped the oscillating balance of decision in favor of that direction. If he had been driven to hunt up Jeff Aiken, now he was called to find this unknown ranger captain. In Duane's state of mind even reasoning, common sense, or bravado were out of the question. He went because he felt he was compelled.

Dusk had fallen when he rode into a town which vaguely discovered to be Fairfield.

There did not appear to be any camp on the outskirts of the town. But as Duane sat his horse, peering about and undecided what further move to make, he caught the glint of flickering lights through the darkness. Pleading toward them he saw the moving forms of men and heard horses. He advanced naturally, expecting any moment to be halted.

"Who goes there?" came the sharp call out of the gloom.

Duane pulled his horse. The gloom was impenetrable.

"One man—alone," replied Duane.

"What do you want?"

"I'm trying to find the ranger camp."

"You've struck it. What's your errand?"

"I want to see Captain MacNelly."

"Get down and advance. Slow. Don't move your hands. It's dark, but I can see."

Duane dismounted, and leading his horse, slowly advanced a few paces. He saw a dully bright object—a gun—before he discovered the man who held it. A few more steps showed a dark figure blocking the trail. Here Duane halted.

"Here, ranger, understand this. My visit is peaceful—friendly if you'll let it be. Mind, I was asked to come here—after dark."

Duane's clear, penetrating voice carried far. The listening rangers at the camp-fire heard what he said.

"Ho, Pickens! Tell that fellow to wait," replied an authoritative voice. Then a slim figure detached itself from the dark, moving group at the camp-fire and hurried out.

"Better be foxy, Cap," shouted a ranger, in warning.

"Shut up—all of you," was the reply.

This officer, obviously Captain MacNelly, soon joined the two rangers who were confronting Duane. He had no fear. He strode straight up to Duane.

"I'm MacNelly," he said. "If you're my man, don't mention your name—yet."

All this seemed strange to Duane, in keeping with much that had happened lately.

"I met Jeff Aiken to-day," said Duane. "He sent me—"

"You've met Aiken!" exclaimed MacNelly, sharp, eager, low. "By all that's bully!" Then he appeared to catch himself, to grow restrained.

"Men, tal' back, leave us alone a moment."

The rangers slowly withdrew.

"Buck Duane! It's you?" he whispered, eagerly.

"Yes."

"If I give you my word you'll not be arrested—you'll be treated fairly—you will come into camp and consult with me?"

"Certainly."

"Duane, I'm sure glad to meet you," went on MacNelly; and he extended his hand.

Amazed and touched, scarcely realizing this actuality, Duane gave his hand and felt an unmistakable grip of warmth.

"It doesn't seem nat'ral, Captain MacNelly, but I believe I'm glad to meet you," said Duane, shyly.

"You will be. Now we'll go back to camp. Keep your identity mum for the present."

He led Duane in the direction of the camp-fire.

"Pickens, go back on duty," he ordered, "and, Deeson, you look after this horse."

When Duane got beyond the line of mesquite, which had hid a good view of the camp site, he saw a group of perhaps fifteen rangers sitting around the fires, near a long, low shed where horses were feeding, and a small adobe house at one side.

"It Ain't Him!"

"We've just had grub, but I'll see you get some. Then we'll talk," said MacNelly. "I've taken up temporary quarters here. Have a rustic job on hand. Now, when you've eaten, come right into the house."

Duane was hungry, but he hurried through the ample supper that was set before him, urged on by curiosity and astonishment. While eating he had bent keen eyes around him. After a first quick scrutiny the rangers apparently paid no more attention to him. They were all veterans in service—Duane saw that—and rugged, powerful men of iron constitution. Despite a general conversation of campfire nature, Duane was not deceived about the fact that his advent had been an unusual and striking one, which had caused an undercurrent of conjecture and even consternation among them. These rangers were too well trained to appear openly curious about their captain's guest. As it was, Duane felt a suspense that must have been due to a hint of his identity.

He was not long in presenting himself at the door of the house.

"Come in and have a chair," said MacNelly, motioning for the one other occupant of the room to rise. "Leave us, Russell, and close the door. I'll be through these reports right off."

MacNelly sat at a table upon which was a lamp and various papers. Seen in the light he was a fine-looking, soldierly man of about forty years, dark-haired and dark-eyed, with a bronzed face, shrewd, stern, strong, yet not wanting in kindness. He scanned hastily over some papers, fussed with them, and finally put them in envelopes. Settling back in his chair, he faced Duane, making a vain attempt to hide what must have been the fulfillment of a long-nourished curiosity.

"Duane, I've been hoping for this for two years," he began.

Duane smiled a little—a smile that felt strange on his face. He had never been much of a talker. And speech here seemed more than ordinarily difficult.

MacNelly must have felt that. He looked long and earnestly at Duane, and his quick, nervous manner

"Come in and Have a Chair."

changed to grave thoughtfulness.

"Ever hear from home since you left Wellston?" he asked, abruptly.

"No," replied Duane, sadly.

"That's tough. I'm glad to be able to tell you that up to just lately your mother, sister, uncle—all your folks, I believe—were well. I've kept posted. But haven't heard lately."

What do you think that Captain MacNelly has in store for Duane? Will Duane ever consent to go to prison?

ACCORDING TO RANCH CODE

Cowboy Did the Only Thing He Felt There Was to Do Under the Circumstances.

A story certainly untrue, but one beautifully plausible, was told by the Abilene (Kan.) Reflector. It concerns a man who—by definition, as the myth ematicians say—had spent all his life on a remote cattle ranch and was utterly inexperienced in any tender or gentler relations than those which exist between men like himself and between them and their bovine charges.

This untutored yet thoroughly well-intentioned person, according to the tale as told, at last went to a border town and there, as might have been expected, he fell promptly and violently in love with the first woman with whom he became acquainted, who happened to be the pretty waitress who served him at the table. His wooing was equally vigorous and successful. In a few days the two were married and together they started back for the ranch on horseback.

A week later the cowboy returned to the town alone and of deeply sorrowful mien. To the natural and immediate inquiries that were made as to the whereabouts of his bride he replied, with tears starting to his eyes and running down his lean, bronzed cheeks: "She broke her leg two days out and I had to shoot her. And I tell you, boys," he added, "I hated to do it—she was such a good woman!"

All Began With a Dime.

"Last spring a year ago," says Farni and Pireside, "a ten-year-old neighbor boy was given ten cents by his grandmother. He purchased a packet of good cucumber seed with his money and grew a nice patch of cucumbers for the local village market. His crop of cucumbers brought him a little over $8 in money, all of which his mother allowed him to keep and spend as he pleased."

State Prohibition and License

 I rode on horseback through from Saginaw to Jackson and counted the saloons at the cross-roads, where the boys from the country would come after their mail, and there were forty-nine.

 Two years after we secured license I went through again. I counted the number of saloons and there were seven, because, with the license system, they could not support more.

 Time went on; the license was raised and we controlled the business as best we could, and, now, here we are today asking to put in absolute prohibition.

 IF WE DO, IN MY JUDGMENT, WE WOULD HAVE PRACTICALLY THE SAME CONDITIONS WE HAD IN YEARS BACK, WHEN WE HAD STATE PROHIBITION.

 AFTER HAVING SEEN THE EFFECTS OF ABSOLUTE PROHIBITION I DO NOT WANT TO SEE IT AGAIN BECOME A LAW IN THIS STATE.

Hon. Wellington R. Burt spoke the above words when he appeared before the Michigan Constitutional Convention, January 30th, 1908. The principles of Home Rule, and a smaller unit of option were outlined by Mr. Burt.

He declared state-wide prohibition to be an unworthy craft. Home Rule allows the unit of prohibition and regulation to be city, village and township in form.

It provides for community law and community enforcement. It fosters sane, safe, democratic and stable government of affairs.
